LONDON, June 1.—The feature of the third day of the trial of Noel Pemberton-Billing, charged with libelling Maud Allan, was the examination of Lord Alfred Douglas as to what he considered was Oscar Wilde's purpose and intent in writing "Salome," upon the production of which play Maud Allan's action is based.

Lord Alfred caused considerable excitement by protesting passionately against the introduction in evidence of the now notorious letter written by Oscar Wilde to him when they were close friends. It began: "My Own Boy."

"This is a letter written to me," Lord Alfred exclaimed excitedly, and it came from a German blackmailer. Every time I come to this court this beastly drivel is brought. I think there are limits."

Justice Darling, inquired what the letter was and counsel replied it was from Wilde to the witness. It contained such phrases as "your slim gilt soul," "the grave twilights of Gothic things," and ended, "Always with undying love, yours, Oscar."

Sample of His Remarks.
Lord Alfred continually interrupted the reading of the letter by excited remarks to counsel, of which this is a sample: "Yes it is; it's a letter written by a diabolical scoundrel to a wretchedly silly youth."

The judge interrupted and directed the witness to listen to the question and answer it, but the witness shouted passionately:

"I shall answer questions as I please, not as you please. I am here to give my evidence and I shall give it. You bullied me the last time, and you will not do it again. I am not here to be bullied again. I was the last time. You deliberately lied to me the last time I was here. I shall give my evidence and answers as I like."

The witness was directed to answer questions properly, but the reply came that "Douglas shall answer as he chooses, not as you choose." The judge threatened to have Lord Douglas removed from the court room if he persisted in that line of conduct.

"I don't care," replied Lord Alfred. "Let me be removed from the court."

Laughter in Court.
Some one laughed in the back of the court room and the judge ordered any one offending again to be removed. "May we laugh at your jokes?" inquired Mr. Pemberton-Billing.

"No," replied the judge, "you may not."

Counsel continued reading the letter and again Lord Alfred became excited. Raising his voice he cried: "That letter was produced by my father in an effort to smash Wilde and save me. It was my father who was trying to save his wretched son and you lawyers come here after twenty-five years and drag it up because you are paid to drag it up."

Dealing with Wilde's purpose in writing "Salome," Lord Alfred said: "I heard him discuss it on numerous occasions with Frenchmen of letters and others also knew what his intentions were. He intended it to be an exhibition of perverted passion in a young girl."

There is one passage which meant to be perverted.
"Did he tell you so?" inquired the judge.

Yes, although he never used the particular word. He used the most flowery language. He expressed the most fearful horror at the coarseness of such a thing.

LONDON, June 1.—At the reopening of the trial of Noel Pemberton-Billing on a charge of libel preferred by Maud Allan and J. T. Grein, manager of the Independent Theatre, to-day, Justice Darling ruled that it was impossible to allow any individual to come forward to refute statements made by the witnesses which really were not relevant to the issue before the court. Mrs. George Keppel, who was present, according to her counsel, to deny on oath that she had been in Holland since the outbreak of the war or had seen Dr. Richard von Kuhlmann, the German Foreign Minister, and other German statesmen, therefore left the court.

An attorney on behalf of the War Office asked permission to submit the military history and medical records of Capt. Harold Sherwin Spencer, who gave startling testimony when examined before the court. He said that these records would "show the true character of that witness." The judge also disallowed this, as the doctors who signed the certificates are out of the country.

DUTCH SHIP OWNERS MUST EXPLAIN DELAY

Washington Probably Will Make Representations.

Special Dispatch to The Sun.
WASHINGTON, June 1.—Vacillation of the Dutch ship owners in connection with permitting vessels to move to and from American ports probably will lead to strong representations by this Government, according to statements in an official quarter here to-day. Two vessels, the Stella and the Java, which some time ago were authorized to load cereals for Holland, have taken on their cargoes and are ready to sail, but for some unexplained reason the owners have instructed both steamships not to depart.

In addition to the cargoes carried by these two ships about 15,000 tons additional have been waiting for transportation from American ports to Holland for ten days and arrangements have been made for another 10,000 tons to be in readiness at any time the steamships arrive to load it.

The action of the Dutch owners in refusing to permit the vessels to sail imposes a delay on measures of the American Government to relieve the food shortage in Holland.

The War Trade Board gave permission to-day to the Dutch steamship Ceylon, which is under contract to return from the Dutch East Indies to the United States, to make a trip from Java to Saigon and return with a cargo of rice to Java. The action was taken with a view of relieving the food shortage in Java.

The movement of foodstuffs to other Dutch colonies, including Dutch Guiana, has been authorized by the United States Government, especially that of flour from Argentina.

HAWAII GUARD IN U. S. ARMY.
Probably Will Be Used to Relieve
Regulars on Duty in Islands.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—President Wilson called into the military service of the United States to-day the First and Second regiments of infantry of the National Guard of Hawaii and all members of its medical personnel. Beginning to-day they were ordered discharged from the militia and subject to law and regulations governing the Regular Army.

The two regiments probably will be used to relieve American regulars now on duty in the islands. They will not be used for service away from home. There are approximately 1,200 men in the two regiments. To this force drafted men from the islands will be added.

Expert German Flier Wounded.
Lieut. Bollart, a German aviator, who is credited with thirty-three victories, has been wounded, according to cable information received here to-day. The German aviator is reported to have lost one of his eyes.
